This four-hour course will be an interactive training which enable Police Officers to provide lifesaving techniques to injured persons. Due to the short duration of the class, topics will only involve those that do the best in a limited time space and will be serious injuries/illness that are commonly witnessed by police officers. Training will be composed of both lectures, with questions and answers, and minor practicals followed by an instructor demonstration.

OUTLINE:

- Identify life threatening illness/injuries.
- Utilize self-aid/buddy-aid/and be familiar with "medicine across the barrier".
- Perform lifesaving medical techniques to stabilize patients until further help arrives.
- Deploy Narcan to opioid overdoses.
- Better communicate and work with local medical providers.
- Understand the emergency medical service (EMS) and their needs.

This course will begin with a brief lesson on common practices when dealing with the Emergency Room and EMS systems. Opioid overdose signs and symptoms will be reviewed with a demonstration in Narcan deployment. We will then go to discuss best practices for preventable trauma related deaths. The instructor will demonstrate the use of tourniquets, pressure bandages, wound packing, and chest seals.
